

Bloomin' Brands Provides Business Update Related to the COVID-19 Pandemic

April 16, 2020

TAMPA, Fla.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Apr. 16, 2020-- Bloomin' Brands, Inc. (Nasdaq: BLMN) today announced additional information resulting from the dynamic environment caused by COVID-19. As a result, we are providing a general business update from our CEO, recent and First Quarter 2020 preliminary sales results and details on cash utilization and liquidity.

Statement from David Deno, Chief Executive Officer

This past month has been an extraordinary time to lead and operate restaurants. Our priorities have centered on taking care of our people and serving food in a safe environment that protects both our Team Members and customers.

We have always taken great pride in taking care of the over 90,000 employees who work in our restaurants, and those who support them at the Restaurant Support Center. We have not terminated or furloughed any employees as a result of COVID-19. For hourly employees impacted by the closure of our dining rooms, we have provided four weeks of relief pay to date and free meals for pick-up. We hope to be able to continue providing these benefits and will reassess our ability to do so every two weeks. In addition, I have suspended my salary, and the Board of Directors has suspended their cash retainers.

Since this situation began in early March, any employee who was quarantined or who had a personal illness related to COVID-19 received pay. In addition, every employee has free access to our Employee Assistance Program for additional support during these stressful times, and we have funded 100% of benefit premiums for employees not working and receiving relief pay.

While our restaurant operators are accustomed to safe food handling and hygiene practices, which includes only allowing healthy employees to work, we have heightened those existing strict standards. We have made changes to offer further protection for customers and employees, including additional sanitation and disinfecting practices, enhanced hand-washing protocols and increased use of gloves and facial protection.

As it relates to the current business environment, we have grown our sales each week since we pivoted to an off-premises only model on March 20th. We have nearly tripled our total off-premises business since the beginning of March. This is a testament to the strong affinity for our brands, and our decision to invest significantly into building a robust delivery network to complement our take-out business. These strong off-premises results have allowed us to keep substantially all of our locations open during this time.

Consistent with our approach in other areas, we are prioritizing cash usage towards supporting our people and maximizing our off-premises business. We have stopped non-essential spending, significantly reduced marketing expenses and have deferred nearly all of our capital expenditures. These efforts have allowed us to minimize our ongoing cash burn, and we are confident about our ability to navigate the current environment. In addition, we are reviewing opportunities to increase our liquidity should we determine that it would be in our best interest to do so.

Although this situation is challenging, we are looking forward to emerging as a better, stronger, operations-focused company. I am more convinced than ever of the important role that full-service restaurants will continue to play in the lives of our customers and our communities. We look forward to providing another update when we announce our first quarter earnings on May 8th.

Cash Utilization and Liquidity Update

As of Wednesday, April 15, we had approximately $304 million of cash on hand in our domestic bank accounts. At recent sales levels, we expect our ongoing weekly cash burn rate to be approximately $8 million to $10 million, excluding any additional changes to net working capital. Outsized cash usage over the most recent four weeks has been primarily related to the wind down of net working capital.

Our assumptions on weekly burn rate include:

- Tight control on all expenditures, including marketing and rent
- Ongoing relief payments and benefits to hourly workers impacted by the closure of our dining rooms
- We evaluate relief payments and the appropriate level of rent payments every two weeks
- Only capital expenditures related to maintenance that supports our off-premises business
